Criteria for Country Programming

GGGI supports its Members to transition to a model of green growth – that delivers economic growth that is both environmentally sustainable and socially inclusive – through a mix of global programming, country programming, and knowledge sharing. Country programs are tailored entirely to the specific circumstances, demand and capacity of each country.

While GGGI hopes to deliver country programmatic interventions in support of Member's transformational economic development, membership does not guarantee country programming. It must balance both the potential to transformational change with its available resources. Moreover, GGGI recognizes that it should periodically assess its value addition, possibility phasing out country operations.

Three broad criteria will guide the decision for GGGI country programming,

1. Strong political commitment, engagement, and contribution to GGGI: GGGI shall focus country programs in countries that have concluded their ratification or approval of the Agreement on the Establishment of GGGI; have in place an effective agreement on privileges and immunities, providing a legal basis for GGGI and its officials to operate in country; and formally requested GGGI support in their economic transformation, including through the establishment of a Country Planning Framework.
2. Potential for the transformation of counties to a green economic model: Recognizing the urgency of action on climate change, GGGI's country programming shall focus on countries with greater green growth potential as defined by GGGI's strategic outcomes of, (a) GHG emission reductions; (b) creation of green jobs; (c) increased access to sustainable services; (d) improved air quality; (e) adequate supply of ecosystem services; and (f) enhance adaptation to climate change.
3. Adequate financial resource to support expansion and deliver impact: GGGI shall focus country programming in those countries that secured multi-year earmarked funding commitments, from either the host country entities or other resource partners. GGGI shall seek multi-year earmarked funding from host country entities in the case of UMICs and HICs; GGGI will not use core contributions to finance operations in UMICs and HICs. GGGI shall seek multi-year earmarked funding from other resource partners – including members of the OECD Development Assistance Committee, emerging providers of development assistance (i.e. countries beyond the OECD DAC), as well as private sector (including foundations).
