Mobilizing Investment Commitments for the Green Transformation

The vast majority of GGGI-initiated green investment projects move forward from concept stage to financing and implementation stage. This is one of the primary conclusions of the new Evaluation of the Global Green Growth Institute's (GGGI) Green Investment Services (GIS), prepared together Finergreen Asia Pte. Ltd., which reviewed 26 recent investment projects.

- USD 357 million, or two-thirds, of the total investment commitments of USD 539 million evaluated have advanced to signed investment agreements or disbursement stage.
- The private sector has committed to raise USD 391 million, or three-quarter, of the total investment.
- Just 0.1% of the total value of the investment commitments has been dropped.

The Approach and Offer of GGGI's Green Investment Services

First, GGGI makes a deliberate "exit" at the point where proven initial investment commitments are secured for specific projects. This distinguishes GGGI as an international organization and its focus on overcoming the obstacles green and climate projects face, in particular in the early development and preparation phases.

Second, as a project developer, GGGI focuses on strengthening the social and commercial viability and impact of projects.

The GIS Team aims to mobilize the initial commitment from financiers or project developers to invest and further advance climate projects in member and partner countries.

Toward this end, GIS works with private and public investors and policymakers to develop bankable projects, design financial instruments and build National Financing Vehicles.

The figure below shows GGGI's niche among various organizations providing support to different types of projects – fully grant funded on the left, commercial investors on the right and high risk/ low return projects in the middle that require support to become bankable and attract concessional or commercial finance.
